SCHEDULE A.

RULES FOR THE ERECTION OF LIGHTNING CONDUCTORS.

1. Material of Rod.—Copper, weighing not less than 6 oz. per foot run, the electrical conductivity of which is not less than 90 per cent. of that of pure copper, either in the form of rod, tape, or rope of stout wires; no individual wire being less than No. 12 B.W.G (.109"). Iron may be used but should not weigh less than  $2\frac{1}{4}$  lbs. per foot run.

2. Joints.—Every joint, besides being well cleaned and screwed, scarfed, or riveted, shall be thoroughly soldered.

3. Form of Points.—The point of the upper terminal* of the conductor shall not have a sharper angle than 90°. A foot below the extreme point a copper ring shall be screwed and soldered on to the upper terminal, in which ring must be fixed three or four sharp copper points, each about 6 inches long. It is desirable that these points should be so platinised, gilded, or nickel-plated, as to resist oxidation.

4. Number and Height of Upper Terminals.—The number of conductors or upper terminals required will depend upon the size of the building, the material of which it is constructed, and the comparative height above the ground of the several parts. No general rule can be given for this, except that it may be assumed that the space protected by a conductor is, as a rule, a cone, the radius of whose base is equal to the height of the conductor from the ground.

5. Curvature.—The rod should not be bent abruptly round sharp corners. In no case should the length of a curve be more than half as long again as its chord. A hole should be drilled in string courses or other projecting masonry, when possible, to allow the rod to pass freely through it.

6. Insulators.—The conductor should not be kept from the building by glass or other insulators, but attached to it by fastenings of the same metal as the conductor itself is composed of.

7. Fixing.—Conductors should preferentially be taken down the side of the building which is most exposed to rain. They should be held firmly, but the holdfasts should not be driven in so tightly as to pinch the conductor or prevent contraction and expansion due to changes of temperature.

8. Other Metal Work.—All metallic spouts, gutters, iron doors, and other masses of metal about the building should be electrically connected with the conductor.

9. Earth Connection.—It is most desirable that, whenever possible, the lower extremity of the conductor should be buried in permanently damp soil. Hence proximity to rain-water pipes and to drains or other water is desirable. It is a very good plan to bifurcate the conductor close below the surface of the ground, and to adopt two of the following methods for securing the escape of the lightning into the earth:—

- (1.) A strip of copper tape may be led from the bottom of the rod to a gas or water main (not merely to a leaden pipe), if such exist near enough, and be soldered to it;
- (2.) A tape may be soldered to a sheet of copper 3 ft. × 3 ft. ×  $\frac{1}{16}$  inch thick, buried in permanently wet earth and surrounded by cinders or coke;
- (3.) Many yards of copper tape may be laid in a trench filled with coke, having not less than 18 square feet of copper exposed.

10. Protection from Theft, &c.—In cases where there is any likelihood of the copper being stolen or injured it should be protected by being enclosed in an iron gas-pipe reaching 10 ft. (if there is room) above ground and some distance into the ground.

11. Painting.—Iron conductors, galvanized or not, should be painted. It is optional with copper ones.

12. Inspection.—When the conductor is finally fixed it should in all cases be examined and tested by a qualified person, and this should be done in the case of new buildings after all work on them is finished.

* The upper terminal is that portion of the conductor which is between the top of the edifice and the point of the conductor.
